

vernacular architecture

Here in the Midwest, the family farm is the cornerstone of our heritage, and for many of us, the stage of our childhood.

Farmsteads and accompanying implements are more than nostalgic symbols and backdrops for a drive through the countryside, for they are the roots of our families, communities, and civilization.

architecture inc.

The reuse, interpretation, and integration of these agrarian forms into our architecture of today, is our way of building on the foundation of our midwestern heritage.

